UCSF Joins SF Choral Society

Mitchell Zachs

Just four months ago, Adrian Horn decided he would like to involve UCSF in his new San Francisco Choral Society. Since January, he has been holding rehearsals every Tuesday evening at 7 p.m. in Cole Hall. And so far, UCSF membership has grown to 50 troubadours. And, there's plenty of room for more.

"From the downbeat of the first rehearsal, it was evident that the talented singers of UCSF were capable of producing choral music of the highest quality," says Adrian.

Actually, the Choral Society is made up of three different choral groups: The Community Chorus (where UCSF employees raise their voices), the Chamber Chorus and the Women's Chorus of San Francisco.

"The sky is the limit. Whoever wants to sing can come and sing," assures Adrian.

Adrian is well known in San Francisco for developing several choral groups over the years. He most recently rebuilt the San Francisco State University Chorus from 35 to 200 members. He is a doctoral candidate at Columbia specializing in choral music in the community, but says gleefully, "I'm almost too busy practicing my dissertation to finish writing it."

The Choral Society is no small libretto. In fact, according to Adrian, it is run like a big-time business. "We're as ambitious as any $100,000 organization," and he adds modestly, "just as good!" He explains that he hires orchestras, holds auditions, sends out press releases, pays for printing concert posters, flyers and tickets. Ticket sales and membership dues help offset the costs. Dues for UCSF members are $25 every four months; $30 general public.

The Choral Society's first full-scale concert featuring UCSF employees will be held on Sunday, March 5, at 4 p.m. at the First Congregational Church at Post and Mason Streets. At least 50 UCSF employees will join another 75 voices in song to perform Vivaldi's Gloria and Handel's Coronation Anthem. Plus the Women's Chorus of San Francisco will perform the Stabat Mater by Pergolesi. Tickets are $7.50 general, $6 seniors and students.

The second concert will be held on Friday, March 24, at 8:30 p.m. at Herbst Theater, and will feature the Chamber Chorus performing Mozart's Requiem.

Pediatrics Celebrates 75 Years

UCSF's world-renowned Department of Pediatrics is celebrating "75 Years of Caring for Children" with several events in this, the 1988-89 academic year.

On the weekend of February 25-26, an anniversary symposium at Laurel Heights will feature faculty presentations on topics ranging from pediatric AIDS and prenatal diagnosis to delayed adolescence and respiratory distress syndrome—for which UCSF researchers developed a successful treatment.

Guest faculty at the symposium will be Arthur J. Ammann, adjunct professor, pediatrics and director, collaborative research, Genentech; Helen Blau, associate professor, pharmacology, Stanford; Delbert A. Fisher, professor & chair, pediatrics, Harbor-UCLA Medical Center; Robert P. Kelch, professor and chair, pediatrics, University of Michigan; George Lister, associate professor, pediatrics and anesthesiology, Yale; Stephen A. Spector, associate professor, pediatrics, UC-San Diego.

And from UCSF: Arthur Ablin, Richard Bland, John Clements, Morton Cowan, Michael Edwards, Charles Epstein, Mitchell Golbus, Moses Grossman, Melvin Grumbach, Michael Harrison, Samuel Hawgood, Michael Heymann, Julien Hoffman, Selna Kaplan, Katherine Matthay, Walter Miller, Abraham Rudolph, Norman Silverman, William Tooley, Diane Wara and William Wara.

A black-tie dinner dance in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Nikko will follow the close of the Saturday session.

For further information call Patricia Hunter at x69184.

ASUCSF Talent Extravaganza to Benefit Infants with AIDS

The first campus-wide event to benefit infants with AIDS will be held Friday evening, February 24, in the newly renovated Millberry Gym.

UCSF students, faculty and staff alike have joined together to bring to campus an evening of comedy, dance and vocals, along with some surprises. A few of the featured performances will include jazz vocals by staff nurses Betty Blount and Ernestine Florence, guitar solo by second-year pharmacy student Vu Nguyen, songs by second-year medical student Veil Reese and third-year dental student Anne Hwang, Vietnamese dancing led by third-year pharmacy student Thu Dao, plus radiation oncologist Keith Weaver on the guitar, and Ron Siegel of the School of Pharmacy on the fiddle.

Master of ceremonies will be Eric Greene, talk show host of "Two at Noon" on KTVU-TV, Channel 2.

Doors of the new gymnasium will open at 6 p.m. Hors d'oeuvres will be served, followed by the talent show at 7 p.m.

The evening will be topped off at 10 p.m.

Symposium Recognizes Black Nurses Feb. 24

The School of Nursing will join the campus celebration of Black Heritage Month by sponsoring a symposium to celebrate and inspire black nurses. Entitled "Looking Beyond the Challenge: To See and Shape the Opportunity," the free public program will take place Friday, February 24, from 1 to 4 p.m. in Toland Hall.

Program coordinator DeLois Weekes, assistant professor of nursing, who recently received her doctorate in nursing science at UCSF, is a black nurse who met the challenge of higher education—and she's interested in seeing more members of the black community and other underrepresented groups take the same challenge.

"When you look at the number of blacks and Hispanics pursuing graduate degrees, the higher you go, the smaller and smaller the numbers," she observes. "We'd like to see these numbers better reflect the population." Black enrollment at the School of Nursing, which offers only graduate degrees, is 18 out of 630.

The symposium will focus on the social and political challenges facing black nurses, and strategies for overcoming these chal-

Medical Professionals Needed for Three Summer Research Projects in Brazil

Medical professionals, especially nurse and MD medical anthropologists, are needed to join three separate research expeditions to Brazil to study infant deaths, homeless youths and sharecroppers. The projects are through the University Research Expeditions Program (UREP) at UC-Berkeley.

The first study, to run July 1-31 (two sessions), concerns the very young children who live in the sugar plantation zone of Northeastern Brazil. Nearly 35 percent of all infants in this area die before the end of their first year due to untreated diarrheas, poor nutrition, dehydration and selective neglect.

The second project is from August 6-19. It will study the subculture of the homeless youths in Rio de Janeiro to learn about behavior such as drug abuse and prostitution which makes this group extremely vulnerable to AIDS. The study will be led by UCSF's Cajetan Luna, epidemiology & international health.

The third project runs from July 8 to August 8 (two sessions). It will investigate how sharecroppers in the drought-ridden Northeast cope with the constant threat of famine.

UREP makes it possible for interested members of the public and the University to spend two to three weeks as active members of a UC research team. No previous experience is necessary for most expeditions. Participants make a tax-deductible contribution to cover their expenses and help make the research possible.

For further information write: Desk K03, UREP, UC-Berkeley, CA 94720, or call 642-6586.

Distinguished Lecturer Altman

Larry Altman (left) and Chancellor Krevans at the Ninth Chancellor's Distinguished Lecture for the Public Understanding of Science last Thursday. Altman's lecture on "Who Goes First: Self-Experimentation in Medicine" was based on his book by the same title. Altman is the New York Times medical correspondent and one of the few medical doctors working as a full-time daily newspaper reporter.

Public Service Award Nominations Due

Nominations are due for the 1989 Chancellor's Award for Public Service, recognizing faculty, students and staff who have performed extraordinary community service. Three awards are made annually, two of which may be designated the Thomas N. Burbridge or the Edison Uno Awards.

Candidates for the Burbridge Award should reflect the impact made by this international humanitarian on minorities and disadvantaged communities, and demonstrate particular contributions to equal education and employment opportunity and social justice.

Uno Award candidates should reflect Uno's personal involvement with social, political and civic groups. Candidates should have been involved in two unrelated public service activities for at least the last two years.

Candidates for all the awards should demonstrate outstanding public service beyond the scope of their normal job duties or student requirements.

The awards are for $1,000 each, with an additional $100 given by the UCSF Black Caucus for the Burbridge Award.

Nominations must be returned to the Office of Public Service Programs, Box 0930, 1308-3rd Avenue, by Monday, February 20. The awards will be presented at a luncheon on Founders Day, Thursday, April 6.

Children Who Play for Their Lives

A little girl of three has second-degree burns covering most of her body. A 13-year-old boy has been shot, while another boy of 11 was stabbed last week by his mother's boyfriend. Another teenager, a male prostitute, has AIDS, while an 8-year-old boy has just been told he has cancer.

What all of these children have in common is that they are in the SFGH pediatric unit 6A this week.

And this is a typical week. Most children coming to this unit are traumatized, suffering from drug overdoses, car accident injuries, poisonings, suicide attempts and the like.

"No, we're usually not dealing with your everyday appendicitis here," admits Lois Herman. She and Linda Chapman, both registered rehabilitation therapists, help these children work through the psychosocial aspects of their trauma in what is called the Activity Play Therapy Program.

Just seven months old, this program is a great success, incorporating reading, drawing, acting, puppets, theater, magic, music, clay work, rap songs... any kind of play that works.

Linda and Lois both have strong backgrounds in psychology, child development, the arts and play therapy. Presently, they instruct and oversee seven trainees from San Francisco State and another eight volunteers from SFGH's Volunteer Office, which played an integral part in the Play Therapy Program's inception.

"We assign each child to a trainee or volunteer," explains Lois, "but Linda and I take the more difficult cases, such as child abuse." She adds that regular consultations with the psychiatric and medical staff treatment team help them better assess each child's needs.

This is not simply an arts and crafts program designed to keep children busy. It's a vehicle by which children attempt to master their problems and concerns. Their play tends to reflect their personal situations.

Take Melissa, a five-year old girl who was told by her friends that she was "Superwoman," and if she really wanted to be their friend she'd fly. Then she leapt from a 10-foot jungle gym. Luckily, she only broke a leg.

Melissa plays many hours with a little stuffed baby monkey who continues to fall out of a tree and break his leg. Then he goes to the hospital, unfrightened, where he gets better.

The program, a joint venture of the Departments of Pediatrics and Psychiatry, is very similar in nature to the Medical Center's Child Life Services, but is funded only through several small grants (at least through this June).

cine since 1983 and chair of the Department of Anesthesia from 1967 to 1983. The lectureship will bring to campus each year a nationally recognized leader in medicine who will deliver a lecture of broad-based interest to the campus community.

The lectureship is endowed by Marjorie and James P. Livingston, a member of the UCSF Board of Overseers and UCSF Foundation Board of Trustees. It was Hamilton who first introduced the Livingston family to UCSF, and the lectureship is to honor Hamilton for enhancing the international reputation of the Department of Anesthesia.

Before coming to campus, Hamilton headed the anesthesia department at the University of Iowa College of Medicine for nine years, in which time he trained more than 300 residents in anesthesiology, many of whom have gone on to positions in academic medicine.

Thier also will be at Medicine Grand Rounds that morning at 8 a.m. in Toland Hall to discuss "Metabolic Kidney Stone Disease."

Mmm, Chocolate-y

Yes, it's that time of year again to give flowers and sweets to your lover, family, friends and even your co-workers. And you don't have to go far to accomplish this task. On Tuesday, February 14, beginning at 11 a.m., the UCSF Council will be selling baked goods in the HSW lobby and on the second floor of Medical Sciences, roses in the lobbies of the School of Dentistry and Medical Sciences, and both roses and baked goods in the lobbies of CED, ACC, Laguna Honda and the sublevel I hallway of Laurel Heights. Proceeds will help fund special recognition awards for nonrepresented UCSF employees.

with a dance complete with a light show, "to really get you moving," says Cesar Tumakay, second-year pharmacy student, ASUCSF executive vice president and one of the coordinators of the event.

The extravaganza is in honor of the valuable work being done by the Division of Pediatric Immunology, which has been participating in AIDS research since 1981. Proceeds from the event will help the division continue important research into AIDS transmission in infants.

Among its many goals, this research effort will help determine why some mothers transmit the AIDS virus to their children and some do not. It is hoped that by developing ready means to identify at birth those infants who carry the virus, treatment to counteract it can begin immediately.

Why not set aside that Friday evening for some terrific entertainment, great food, and the chance to dance your booty off? You'll also be contributing to a good cause. Tickets at $7 ($5 if you're a student) are available from student representatives and at the ASUCSF Office, Millberry Union, Rm. 249, east wing.

The event is co-sponsored by Arts & Lectures, Outdoors Unlimited and the Office of the Vice Chancellor for Personnel & Student Services. For further information call x62010.

lenges and grasping opportunities. The speakers will include black nurses who have completed degrees and now are pursuing postgraduate careers, as well as several who currently are enrolled in master's or doctoral programs.

A reception will follow the program. Three hours of continuing education credit is available upon request, $5 in advance or $7 on the day of the program. For further information or to register, call DeLois Weekes, x69711.

The School also will sponsor a symposium on Friday, May 5, for Hispanic nurses. Details on this and other events to coincide with the School's 50th anniversary will appear in future issues of Newsbreak.

New Athletic Facilities Open Feb. 21

The dust is scheduled to clear from Millberry Union on Tuesday, February 21. That's the date when the Cybex Training Center, the movement/aerobics room, new squash and racquetball courts, the renovated gym and pool, and the Fitness Testing Center will open. But, in order for this to occur, be prepared for the following: The pool will be closed from Saturday, February 11, to Tuesday, February 21, and the entire facility will be closed from Thursday, February 16, to Monday, February 20. Questions? Call x62671 or x61800.

Don't Forget to First Dial "1"

Remember: If you're calling a telephone number outside the 415 area, you now must dial "1" first. And if you have automatic dialing on your computer or fax machine, it probably will need adjustment. Pac Bell began "1-plus" dialing in most of the Bay Area last Saturday.

Seven Fulbright Scholars on Campus

The countries of Belgium, Norway, Nigeria, Israel, Spain and Japan are well-represented on campus as seven 1988-89 Visiting Fulbright Scholars make their way through our halls and labs.

Doing research in UCSF departments through this summer are:

- Bruno Hubesch, research assistant, Department of Chemistry, University of Louvain, Belgium. His research is on in vivo nuclear magnetic resonance spectroscopy at the VAMC with Michael W. Weiner.
- Henrik Lund, physician, Lipid Clinic, Department of Pediatrics, University Hospital, Oslo, Norway. His research on cholesterol metabolism is being conducted in the CVRI under Richard J. Havel.
- Yaron Niv, head, Gastroenterology Unit, Rebecca Sieff Government Hospital, Safed, Israel. His research on colonic cancer is being conducted in the Gastrointestinal Research Laboratory under Young S. Kim.
- Olatunji Yinusa Oyeneye, associate professor, Department of Sociology, Ogun State University, Ago-Iwoye, Nigeria. Under the direction of Margaret Clark in the Department of Medical Anthropology, he is studying the care of the aged in American and Nigerian societies.
- Jaron Rabinovici, physician, Department of Ob/Gyn, Sheba Medical Center, Tel Hashomer, Israel. Under Robert Jaffe in the Department of Ob/Gyn & Reproductive Sciences, he is doing research in reproductive endocrinology on hormonal action in adult and fetal gonads.
- Luis Miguel Ruiz Perez, postdoctoral fellow, Institute of Parasitology, Lopez-Neyra, National Research Council, Granada, Spain. His research involves the mechanism of drug resistance in Leishmania. He is in the Department of Biochemistry/Biophysics with Daniel V. Santi.
- Hirohiko Shiraishi, assistant, Department of Pediatrics, Jichi Medical School, Tochigi, Japan. Under the direction of Abraham Rudolph in the CVRI, his research is on the physiology of fetal circulation.

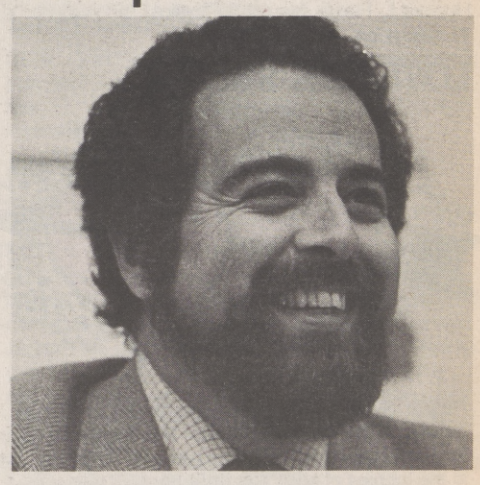
Bracker Back from Friendship Tour



David Bracker has just returned from a two-week friendship tour to Jordan, Israel and the Occupied Territories. He was among 18 delegates from around the country to meet with key Israeli and Palestinian political and community leaders as well as citizens living on both sides of the intense conflict.

David is a principal administrative analyst and special projects coordinator in the Office of the Vice Chancellor—Personnel & Student Services. Getting involved, whether on a local or international level is not new to David. He is a member of the Latino Democratic Club and the American Society on Aging, serves as board chair of the Mission Hiring Hall, is past president of the SF Protagonists and the Mission Armory Foundation and former board member of Planned Parenthood and the United Nations Association.

The Friendship Tour was sponsored by Pax World, a nonprofit organization which "encourages international understanding, reconciliation and development on behalf of world peace and the world's poor."

David offers a slide show of his tour to anyone interested. Feel free to call him at x60733.

Benefits/Personnel

Let's Start Over with Your New Year's Financial Resolutions

Now that you've had time to make and break your 1989 New Year's resolutions about saving millions of dollars—and making millions more off of that—you're out from under the pressure of all that, right?

Good, because now you can clear your mind, clean the slate, and think in more practical terms. Financial Planning's John Beeson offers the following advice on how to slowly begin thinking about—and then actually doing something about getting your financial act together:

- Start by setting some goals. You'll need a clear target if you want the motivation to save and invest. If you've never saved before, prove to yourself you can by starting out with a short-term, achievable goal with a pleasurable payoff—a new camera perhaps, or even a trip to somewhere you always wanted to go. Use the same saving strategy for a more comprehensive financial goal.
- Be realistic. There's nothing wrong with "slow but sure." A little bit at a time eventually makes a lot. The key to realizing your goals is in establishing a managable savings and investment strategy. And, unless you are starting very late in working toward your major objectives, there most certainly is a strategy within your comfort zone.
- Begin at the beginning. Before you start looking at "hot" investments, protect yourself. Stash three to six months' worth of living expenses in an account that allows fast withdrawals with little or no penalty. Also make sure you have adequate disability, life, and other insurance protection.
- Set yourself up for success. When you are ready to expand your investments, remember that your investment style should reflect the time you have to devote to it and your financial expertise. No one is as interested in your money as you are. Thus, if you are willing to spend the time and energy researching the issues, you'll be your own best money manager. If you are not willing—or just have no stomach for it—at least spend the time it takes to find a financial adviser you trust.
- Don't underestimate your retirement needs. Fortunately, these days, you can expect to plan for 25 or 30 years of retirement. Unfortunately, inflation can make even sizable savings seem insignificant. If living costs rise at a moderate 5%, an income of $1,000 a month when you were 60 would have only $295 of today's purchasing power when you hit 85. UC's 403(b) tax deferred savings plan can help you overcome these daunting figures.

If all of the above sounds pretty good, but you have no idea how to even begin setting goals or planning a strategy, we'll leave you with this last excellent piece of advice. Call Financial Planning at x69256 for an appointment. Because of the demand, the waiting period can be up to eight weeks. But, at least you'll be taking a step in the right direction.

How are the Funds Performing?

For those invested in the additional savings programs, here are the latest unit values and monthly factors (as of December 31, 1988):

- Accumulation Unit Values
  Equity Fund: $51.50 (1.8%)* (9.56%)
  Bond Fund: $33.18 (0.9%)* (9.50%)
- Monthly Factors
  Savings Fund: .0071 (8.88%)
  Money Market Fund: .0058 (7.21%)
  GIC Fund: .0075 (9.38%)

*Percentages represent change in unit value from previous month.

Percentages represent total percentage increase over previous 12-month period.

Percentages represent the most recent returns expressed as an annualized rate. The money market and savings rates change monthly.

EMPACT!

Come to the "Kick-Off '89" Party February 23

EMPACT! is hosting a party to celebrate the new season on Thursday, February 23, at 4:30 p.m. at the Faculty Club. Are you invited? Yes!

While you are there socializing, eating, and listening to music, you may notice some tables attended by EMPACT! volunteers. They'll tell you all about EMPACT! and how you can get involved.

If you're new to UCSF, you may appreciate a quick explanation: EMPACT! is a recreational activities club run by employees. Look in the EMPACT! "Action Line" newsletter (available at the Millberry Union Central Desk) for a sample of the activities—all varieties of trips and outings, sports tournaments, clubs; and discounts on movies, concerts, theater, classes, etc.

EMPACT!'s motto is: "The more people who participate, the better we can make it." Come to the party, and find out how you can take an active part in EMPACT!

(Of course, if you want to come to the party just to eat, drink, meet people and be merry—and see if you win a raffle prize—that's okay, too.)

Correction

You may recall a photo in this column last issue advertising the EMPACT! Valentine's Gala. The caption said something about Elizabeth Martin and Bruce Morris from Eye Photography being romantically linked. That's not true. It was a complete misunderstanding on the part of Newsbreak/Medsounds. We're very sorry!

Meet Klaudia Liebold, the Youngest Chaplain Ever Ordained in Germany

Klaudia Liebold, a resident of a city in Germany called Mulheim an der Ruhr, is 30 years old. She was ordained as a pastor four years ago, making her the youngest pastor ever ordained in Germany at the time. Three years ago she became a hospital chaplain, the only chaplain in a 635-bed hospital. Three weeks ago she arrived here at the Medical Center to take part in our Clinical Pastoral Education (CPE) program.

"It's like a 'spring into cold water,' as we say in German," she says of her arrival here and immediate plunge into chaplaincy duties up on the floors. This is Klaudia's first time in the United States and virtually her first opportunity to use the English she studied in school. "Of course I run into difficulties all the time," she says in her hesitant, but amazingly fluent English. "I think it was the second or third day when a patient wanted me to repeat "Our Father" with her, and I had to tell her, 'I don't know the words in English.' But we worked it out. We each prayed in our own language."

She already has noticed numerous differences between hospitals and responsibilities here and at home.

"One thing, at home the patients stay in the hospital much longer," she observes. "Here, sometimes I see them one day, and the next day they are gone already." Another thing that surprised her is that there are no church services at the hospital here, outside of what is available on TV.

"At home, we have a chapel—a very big room on the tenth floor—and every Saturday evening I conduct a service. It is usually very well attended. Many of the patients are in wheelchairs or even in beds, but the nurses help them get there. The service is important to them."

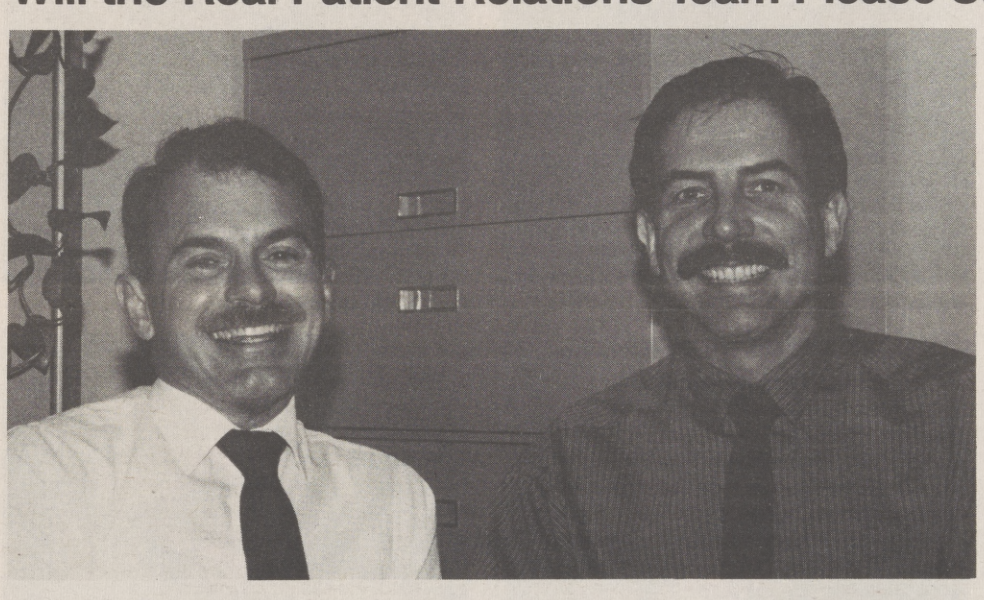
She also teaches courses in the nursing school that is operated by the hospital—the arrangement of most nursing schools in Germany.

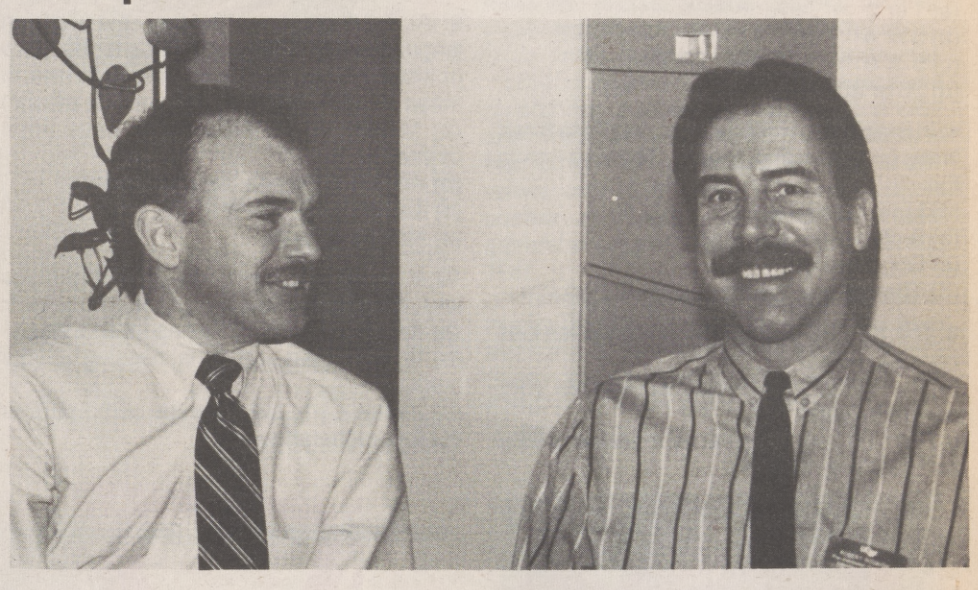
What does she teach? "Well, berufskunde" she says, smiling. It seems this means something like "professional behavior," directly translated. It has to do with human relations, and bedside manners, and dealing with feelings, sickness, death, dying and loss.

One of the most enviable differences she sees is the larger number of social workers here—they have three for the entire hospital—and the additional chaplains available because of the CPE program. This brings us to Klaudia's reason for being here. She intends to become a CPE supervisor, and begin a program similar to ours in her hospital at home. Her three-month stint here will fulfill part of the requirements she must meet before she takes her supervisorial examinations in Germany.

"I observe how wonderful it is to be part of a group," she says of the CPE program here, headed by Rod Seeger. "At the hospital in Germany, I am just one person. Here, we each have assigned areas; then once a day we meet to discuss what happened that day, and we share ideas. This is what I look forward to having at home."

Will the Real Patient Relations Team Please Stand Up?





To the left is Rufus Battles, the former patient services manager in Accounts Receivable, and the brand new patient relations coordinator for the Medical Center. To the right is Richard Roginski, who served as interim coordinator, and now will assist Rufus in running the program. With the addition of a soon-to-be-hired administrative assistant, this is the new patient relations team. Please note that M 181, the area next to the cashiers, is the Patient Relations Office (and not Grand Central Station, as you may have thought it was called).

Rufus says this job is not unrelated to his last, in which he handled all billing inquiries for the Medical Center. Billing matters, he says, comprise a large portion—probably about half—of all patient inquiries. In addition to handling inquiries (aka "complaints"), the patient relations program coordinates the interpreter program, the Med Center Gift and Endowment Funds, and gets involved in any number of patient-related matters, from education to outreach.

It's in the latter area that Rufus intends to concentrate his energy. "Anything we can do to make our function proactive rather than reactive—in other words, preventing complaints rather than responding to them—is the direction I see us going." He says the key is in keeping patients as informed as possible. "The more that patients understand about their care, about the admitting process, about the billing system—or even how to find their way around the Medical Center—the more secure they will feel. And the less room there will be for any misunderstanding."

If you want to call Rufus either to welcome him or offer advice—or both—phone x69436.

To the right, this time, is Robert Roginski, a member of the Admitting staff and twin of Richard (in left photo). The situation, says Robert, is that Richard has a more visible position in the Medical Center and gets his picture in the paper quite a bit. The result is that people frequently think he (Robert) is Richard.

Thus, we'd like to take this opportunity to help establish Robert's identity; and while there is no chance that people will cease confusing the two, at least it may happen that someone will take Richard for Robert, instead of the reverse.

First, let us aquaint you with Robert's function in the Admitting Department. He is the pre-admitting coordinator, which largely has to do with screening insurance authorizations. He does all the training for new department members. And he acts as interim supervisor as needed, such as right now, while Gloria Repetto is in Peru for six weeks.

At home, he is an artist and avid reader. At a showing of his abstract colored pencil drawings last October, he sold 14 out of 16 works. Right now he's preparing for another show next November at "Sweet Inspirations" on Fillmore.

If you're interested in books he'd recommend, he's currently reading Lazar Malkin Enters Heaven, the story of a young Jewish boy growing up in Memphis by Steve Stern; and Parting the Waters, a biography of Martin Luther King by Taylor Branch. He recommends both.

In regard to the beef about his brother being better known than he is, it's all in good nature. The worst of the consequences is the mistaken identities, which, he admits, is amusing rather than annoying. Frankly, crossing paths with his brother every day is fine with him. "We're best friends."

This Photo Represents Plenty of Firsts

You've seen quite a few photographs of liver transplant patients over the past year, but here's your first glimpse of Shirley Nebeker, our first liver transplant patient, shown here celebrating the first anniversary of the liver transplant program at UCSF.

Shirley, who is 54 and the mother of seven, represented another first when she had her transplant a year ago February 1: Hers was the first such procedure performed in a Bay Area hospital. Of our 45 liver transplant patients to date, 30 were able to make it to the anniversary party, along with lots of family members and staff. Included among the guests were several of Mrs. Nebeker's children, who offered one more first to the above: "She's a first-class mom."

Kiss Quiz Answers

Answers to the quiz on page 8: 1.(a) 2.(c) 3.(b) 4.(a) 5.(d) 6.(e) 7.(b) 8.(c) 9.(a) 10.(d)

Scoring: If you scored 6-10 correct answers, you know a lot about kissing, and you're probably a good kisser, too.

If you scored 0-5, you don't seem to know much about kissing, and probably aren't a very good kisser. You should take kissing classes.

Valentine's Special: A Kissing Quiz and a Contest

The Quiz

Just in time for Valentine's Day, here are some questions to test your kissing savvy. Answers and scoring guide are on page 7.

1. A row of Xs at the bottom of a letter stands for kisses because:
(a) In the Middle Ages the illiterate would draw an X on a contract and then kiss it to show sincerity, and eventually the X itself came to signify a kiss.
(b) In the Middle Ages, "kiss" was spelled "kixx," and eventually the X itself came to signify a kiss.
(c) In the Middle Ages, you would always kiss your betrothed before you made your exit, and eventually the X-it-self came to signify a kiss.

2. Visitors to Ireland kiss the Blarney Stone for:
(a) The ability to make good Irish stew.
(b) The ability to dance a jig
(c) The gift of gab
(d) An Irish accent

3. French friends who know each other very well greet one another with how many kisses on alternating cheeks:
(a) 1 or 2
(b) 3 or 4
(c) 5 or 6
(d) 25 or 30

4. In Brazil when friends meet, they kiss three times on alternating cheeks. The final kiss is for:
(a) Luck in marriage
(b) A chicken in every pot
(c) Good health
(d) The rhythm (3/4 time, as in music)

5. The 19th Century Chinese-Mongolian kiss consisted of:
(a) Fluttering your eyelashes against your partner's cheek
(b) Placing your lips near your partner's face and suddenly inhaling
(c) Bumping noses
(d) Pressing your nose to your partner's cheek, inhaling through your nose and smacking your lips noisily

6. Kisses we could do without:
(a) Kisses between people and pets
(b) Social kisses from private enemies
(c) Kisses the TV wife gets after removing the ring around the collar
(d) Kisses politicians plant on unsuspecting babies
(e) All of the above

7. A well-known superstition goes that if your nose itches, you will be kissed by:
(a) A stranger
(b) A fool
(c) A frog
(d) Your grandmother

8. In the 1920s, etiquette expert Emily Post decreed that when a man met a woman in a restaurant, he should:
(a) Kiss her on the hand
(b) Kiss her on the cheek
(c) On no account kiss her
(d) Shake hands

9. At the turn of the century, the German language had 30 different words for 30 types of kisses. They have since dropped one of those words—nachkussen—which means:
(a) Making up for kisses that have been omitted
(b) Kissing someone for the first time
(c) Kissing after dinner
(d) Kissing cousins

10. If you like to close your eyes when you kiss, it's good to open them from time to time:
(a) To see if your partner has fallen asleep
(b) To see if your partner is messing up your hair
(c) To see if you still have the same partner
(d) Any of the above

The Contest

You could win a beautiful bunch of red roses donated by "You See Flowers" (and get your photo in Medsounds) if you correctly guess the identity of these kissers. Big hint: They are all well-known (or at least moderately well-known) Med Center personalities. We even give you their departments.

The way you enter is to rip out the photos, and write the names underneath each one. Then send it to Medsounds Valentine's Contest, Box 0208, with your name, department and extension. If you win, you probably want the roses in time for Valentine's Day—so let's say your entry has to be received by 2 p.m. on Tuesday, February 14. We'll call the winner a few minutes later. (If you want to walk it over, drop it in the marked box in M 181.)

Looking for Someone to Do Your Wedding? How About Moffitt Catering?

If you've been to any parties produced by Moffitt Catering lately, chances are you were pleasantly surprised—or even dumbfounded—by the food.

In fact, you probably heard people saying things like, "Moffitt Catering sure isn't what it used to be," or "Susan Klugerman certainly has turned the hospital catering into a first-class act."

Susan Klugerman is the whiz caterer who came here two years ago, proceeded to deinstitutionalize the Med Center's catering service, and built a reputation that has people singing their praises. Now she plans to take that reputation outside the walls of the Medical Center. Early next fall, the catering service will be officially launched in the community under the new name "University House—Custom Catering and Event Planning."

Meanwhile, they've already undertaken several outside catering jobs—including several weddings—and will continue to do so through word-of-mouth referrals until the official public debut.

Naturally, they'll still provide the service here. But catering is a rather seasonal business, so adding this new dimension makes sense. For instance, this past holiday season—from December 2 to December 23—they catered 43 parties on campus, averaging 50 to 60 people each. But right after Christmas, business dies way down. So why not fill the slack with outside business? They've got the staff, the time, and certainly the talent.

No doubt you are interested in this talent. In other words, what is Susan's background? What did she do to turn Moffitt catering around? And who are the people who support her in the catering service?

In answer to the first question, Susan came here directly from Neiman-Marcus, where she first directed the restaurant and catering for the San Francisco store, and then opened the restaurant and catering operations in Palo Alto. Previous to that she lived in Washington DC, where she was a staff caterer for the US Congress and manager of the Congress conference center.

Her method for revamping Moffitt Catering included separating the production from the main cafeteria kitchen; buying all new equipment; updating, expanding, and injecting imagination into the menu; purchasing only top quality ingredients (fresh pasta and choice Norwegian smoked salmon, for example); and paying attention to presentation and service. And thanks to her ability to take advantage of Medical Center resources (i.e., ordering as a part of the huge orders put forth by the cafeteria), she can offer all this at very competitive prices.

As for her support staff, it's the same group of people, for the most part, who were here when she arrived—"hardworking, talented people who have good reason to be proud of their work, " she says.

Frank Rivera, catering chef and long-time employee, has taken over the responsibility for food quality and presentation. Shirley Wing, another long-time employee, oversees the presentation and service aspects. "And I just have to mention Kim Chu," she says. "From 6 to 9 every morning, he delivers the standing coffee orders. We're talking about 5 to 6 orders every half hour, from the bottom floor to the top. No one else can do his job."

Susan recently returned from a national catering convention in New Orleans, where she sampled a number of regional specialties. The spicy alligator appetizer is not going to find its way into their repertoire, but "muffaletta"—a southern sandwich of meats and cheeses and olive relish—already has. "We're always looking for new recipes or developing our own," she says. And they're always open to new (wonderful) ideas. If you have any such thing of your own (or if you're interested in having your work-related or personal event catered), give her a call—x61461.
